FEATURE STORY

MONSTERS OF THE DEEP!

HEY!
ANYBODY OUT THERE!?

Underneath the ocean waves lurk some of the most mysterious and dangerous creatures in the world! The fascinating facts about the giant squid, the shark, and the killer whale inspired LEGO model designers to create Ogel's mutant sea beasts. But what do we really know about these amazing "monsters of the deep"?

Ogel designed his Shark Sub after a great white shark.

JUST SQUIDDING AROUND

If you wrote down a list of everything scientists know for certain about giant squid, it would be very, very short. Giant squid live in the deepest parts of the ocean, sometimes as far down as 1,300 metres! No one has ever captured a living giant squid, so important facts like what they eat, how long they live, even how big they can grow are still mysteries.

Giant squid are the world's largest invertebrates. An invertebrate (in-vur-tuh-brit) is a creature that has no backbone. An earthworm is an invertebrate but giant squid are much bigger!

Giant squid have tentacles, like an octopus, that they use to grab their prey. They also have a beak like a parrot, which is strong enough to snap steel wire. When they're threatened or afraid, they can shoot a cloud of black ink from a sac in their body to confuse their foes.

The only known enemy of a giant squid is a sperm whale, the largest species of whale in the ocean, but no-one knows how the sperm whales find and catch them!

SNACK FOR A SHARK?

When you think of scary ocean creatures, you probably think of sharks. There have been lots of books and movies about sharks. How dangerous are sharks, and should you worry about one making a snack out of you?

Most shark attacks are actually the result of "mistaken identity". In cloudy or murky water, the shark mistakes a swimmer or a surfer for a big fish or a seal.

The truth is you have a higher chance of being struck by lightning - twice! - than you do of being attacked by a shark.

SCIENTISTS USE "SHARK RINGS" TO STUDY SHARKS UP CLOSE.

GOOD THING I'M NOT PREPARED TO LOSE TO YOU!

Ever feel like life has you climbing the walls?

Well, so does this awesome robot — only he can really do it! This wall-crawling wonder made his debut at the LEGO MINDSTORMSTM Mail Tour in 2000. He was so popular that building instructions for him were added to the Ultimate Builders Set.

The wall-climber is just one of the great new robots you can build with this expansion set for the LEGO MINDSTORMS RIS. The Ultimate Builders set makes it possible for you to add pneumatics, an extra motor, and over 300 new LEGO elements to your inventions. It also includes interviews with LEGO Master Builders, so you can get the story behind your favourite robotic creations.

Ultimate Builders Set even makes inventing easier than ever before by including on-screen building instructions for seven cool robots! Unfortunately, you can't disguise a robot as you and send it off to school in the morning – but you can turn one of your robots into a champion science project!

So why start climbing the walls? With RIS and the Ultimate Builders Set, you can let a robot do it for you!

The Ultimate Builders Set is more than the wall climber! Check out these awesome models built with the Ultimate Builders Set...
